

Recovery Room

It's time for "What's That Mean?" Today....

You will be in a special room called a "recovery room" right after your surgery, so the nurses and doctors can keep a close eye on you until the anesthesia has worn off completely.

You will be able to talk, but you might be kind of weak and a little fuzzy-headed when you first wake up.

How about eating? Will I be able to eat? You know I can't go long without something to nibble on.

Well, it'll take a little bit, but if you listen to what the nurses and doctors and your parents tell you, you'll be back to eating and playing in no time.
