

What's That Mean? - Respiratory Syncytial Virus (RSV)

Bronchiolitis is a common lung infection for infants and small children, and is almost always caused by a virus - usually one called respiratory syncytial virus or RSV.

RSV is highly contagious and can be spread by people sneezing, coughing, or laughing near your child.