

Coagulate

Your blood is on the front lines of defense after damage and injury.

You see, blood can coagulate -- that is, change from a liquid to a gel to form a blood clot -- to stop bleeding and give your body time to repair itself.