

Effects of Stroke

A stroke can affect how someone moves, thinks, and feels. Specific challenges depend on which part of their brain was injured and how badly.

A stroke can damage parts of the brain that control: movement, speech and writing, memory, emotions, vision, and more.

Fortunately, quality care after a stroke can help with recovery. Learn more at stroke.org.