

Definition: Retinopathy

Retinopathy is a disease in the retina, a part of the eye that creates the images you see.

It is a possible complication of diabetes that can cause vision loss or blindness.

Retinopathy happens when the retina, the back of your eye, becomes damaged.

Early stages of retinopathy might not come with symptoms, however as it progresses people might experience... blurred vision, floating spots or strings in areas of vision, vision loss.

Want to know more about retinopathy and possible treatments?

Talk with your care team. They are here to help.