

Hangover IV Therapy

Overview

You had a little too much fun last night. OK, maybe way too much. Now you're dealing with the pain and nausea of a hangover. But you don't have time for this. Today, you need to be at your best. Well, there is an IV therapy made specifically for hangovers.

What's in it?

The hangover treatment's main component is the saline solution itself. That's because a mild dehydration caused by drinking alcohol contributes to hangover symptoms like fatigue and headache. IV therapy quickly increases the fluid in your blood. Your hangover IV may also contain B vitamins and an antioxidant called "glutathione." The B vitamins support your energy levels and your brain health. Glutathione helps your body deal with the free radicals produced as your body breaks down alcohol. And, your IV may also contain anti-inflammatory and headache medicines.

Tailored for you

Hangover symptoms are different from person to person. To have your hangover drip tailored for you, tell your IV therapy specialist about your symptoms.
